About Hungarian

Hungarian is a Uralic language unrelated to most other languages in Europe. It is mainly spoken in Hungary and by the Hungarian minorities in the seven neighbouring countries. The Hungarian name for the language is Magyar.

There are about 14.5 million native speakers, of whom 9.5–10 million live in modern day Hungary. A further two million speakers live outside present-day Hungary. Of these, the largest group lives in Romania (Transylvania), where there are approximately 1.4 million Hungarians. Hungarian-speaking people are also to be found in Slovakia, Serbia, Ukraine, Croatia, Austria, and Slovenia, as well as about a million people scattered in other parts of the world.
